The United States and Mexico

The boys were out on the porch im-patiently awaiting Uncle Harry. As he same as intervention?"

warm."

"Are we going to have war with Mexico?" he rejected, as the three entered the library. "What makes you two ask that question?"

"Why, the Mexicans have come up across the boundary line between the United States and Mexico and burned the tewn of Columbus, New Mexico."

"Has anything like this ever happened before?" asked Joe.

Uncle Harry thought a moment.

"Yes," he said. "Inglist an Indian chief named Geronimo, who was a real bad indian, started on the warpath and invaded Sonora, one of the northern of the Mexican provinces. After numerous outrages, he took refuge in the moment.

"At that time the United States and United States and Mexico and burned the town of Columbus. New Mexico, and killed a number of people who lived there. Isn't that enough reason to go to war?"

"Think Jimmy," said Uncle Harry, laying his hand on Jimmy's shoulder, "Wall."

"Was it a real troop of Mexicans re-presenting the Mexican government that burned Columbus and killed Americans there, or was it a band of outlaws that are defying the Mexican government?"

"Why, it was a band of outlaws I guess, but they're Mexicans just the same."

same."

"No, Jimmy, you're wrong," replied Uncle Harry.

"The Mexican government does not stand behind the actions of all the people who live in Mexico any more than our own government stands behind some of the Americans who do things that are forbidden by law, such as the lynchers in Ceorgia. That's why they are called 'outlaws;' they're outside the law and the law doesn't protect them. On the other hand, the 40-ernment does its best to catch the culprits and bring them to justice."

"Well," said Jimmy, "is the Mexican law trying to catch these bandits and bring them to justice."

"Yes, indeed," answered Uncle Harry, "but the new government of Mexico, the Carranza government of Mexico, the Carranza government is new ly established and is not yet in full control of all the outlying provinces.

"Yes, indeed," answered Uncle Harry, "but the new government of Mexico, the Carraixa government, is newly established and is not yet in full control of all the outlying provinces. That is the reason these bandits under Villa, the former Carranza general, have been able to carry on these acts of law-lessness. The United States has been very patient, too patient many people think, and because it has not taken steps before now to stop these outlaws, the outlaws themselves have grown bolder and bolder until at last they have crossed the boundary into the United States and outraged an American village."

"Why should these bandits want to kill Americans and burn a village on our side of the border?" asked Joe. "There are two principal feasons. One is that Villa seeks revenge on the United States for recognizing Carranza. his rival for the presidency of Mexico. The other is that by outrages of this kind he may be able to lead the United States to think that Carranza cannot keep order in Mexico, and thus force the United States to send troops down into Mexico to take over the government; this, of course, would cause the everthrow of the Carranza government."

"Jim" Leaves No. 21 Engine Company to Take Job in Street Cleaning Department

Grown old in the service of the District government. "Jim." a faithfu! servitor of the Fire Department, has been retired without pension.

"Jim" is a black gelding. For four teen years he has answered the sound of the gong. But Jim, whose last assignment was with No. 21 engine company, has responded to his last alarm. As a member of the Fire Department he has outlived his usefulness, and his remaining days will be spent in the service of the Street Cleaning Depart-
